Club & Association News
From the Presidents Desk

Hi and welcome

Have you had a look at the trip board? What a great number of trips to choose from. Our trip leaders do a fantastic job and the effort they put in is rewarded only by you going on trips. Some of these trips will have training coordinated into them. Please let any of our training officers know that you require training.

I will be coordinating a social night at the British Working Men's Club on April 10 for a meal and a dance with a good all round band. Last year when this social event was held 56 people turned up and made it a fantastic night, don't miss out, be early, put your name on the trip sheet. Also please remember you may ask you friends to join you and have a good time too.

Think about a first aid course and how valuable it could be if somebody was injured while on a trip. Our club is looking at doing a course but will need some help from you, as our application for a grant was rejected. We will keep trying and hope to succeed in the future but will also investigate a partially club funded course.

Regards

Yours in 4WDing.

Thanking you, Rob Stennett, President 4WD Adventurers Club

Editor's Notes (newslettereditor@4wdadventurers.org)

The newsletter has the Australia Day long weekend Port Lincoln / Coffin Bay trip from which the front cover of the spectacular dunes at Lincoln National Park comes from - thanks to Baz.

I have often wondered what the various fire restrictions were during the fire danger season. So I have gone to the CFS website and have placed a copy of the relevant restrictions for 4WD'ers in the newsletter,

4WD Driver Tips

Re inflating tyres in the bush

Check if your compressor is able to be re seat the bead of a tyre before leaving for your big trip.

1. A bicycle tube can help re seat a tyre [ask a club trainer how].
2. Use your spare tyre as an air reservoir.
3. Ratchet strap or a rope around the diameter of the tyre.
4. Aero start.

Recent Trip Reports (Pre-March 2010)

Part Lincoln & Coffin Bay - 22nd to 26th January 2010

The Township of Coffin Bay is located on lower Eyre Peninsula on the shores of Port Douglas Bay and has a permanent population of approximately 650 people which swells by a further 3,000 plus people during the summer school holidays and Easter periods. British naval explorer Matthew Flinders named the bay on 16 February 1802 in honour of his friend Sir Isaac Coffin, who was Resident Naval Commissioner at Sheerness, where the Investigator was fitted out.

Friday 22nd Jan 2010

Our trip started at 0800hrs as we left home for a days drive to Port Augusta then down again to Port Lincoln, then across to Coffin Bay. We arrived at the Coffin Bay Caravan Park at about 1630, where we met Brian & Pat and Brian & Ann who had travelled earlier (Brian & Pat had already been told off by the caravan site manager for hoon behaviour?). We chatted during the night to get the low down on the best places to visit tomorrow as the trip leader Murray & Faye were not due to arrive until Saturday evening.

Saturday 23rd Jan 2010

We tended to go our separate ways today as the other campers had already done the northern beaches, so today it was our turn to explore. Our first stop was Farm Beach. Well what can I say? Bright white sands, lovely cove and the local fishermen launching/landing their boats.

Next on the list was Coles Beach. Well at the moment the beaches are getting better as we go. Again bright white sands within a cove. Almost a shame to put footprints in the sand. Murray & Faye arrived early evening after a long drive.

Sunday 24th Jan 2010

We were off was at 0900 heading to Coffin Bay National Park. We paid the park entry fees $8.00 per car for the days entry (camping extra). During the day we meandered across a mixture of stony track and sand track stopping at the designated camp sites within the park. (I will definitely return) We found several perfect camp sites, from your camper about 20m to the beach for the morning swim, or afternoon beer with the fishing rods out. We continued our journey north where we entered onto 7 mile beach where we passed a few vehicles stopped with the occupants trying a bit of sand surfing. (Alice wanted to try this on the way back). Made our way up to Port Sir Issac lighthouse spotting the local wildlife on the way. Emu's seemed to be abundant (a few groups of 2 or 3). At the lighthouse we saw a pod of dolphins about 10m from the rocks. Continued west to Mullalong beach where we had lunch on the again pristine white sands with no foot prints. We soon changed that, well Alice, & Hannah did. Sensation beach was next on the trip, and boy was the water clear, fresh and again pristine white sand. This was probably the beat beach of the day, incidently not named because of the quality/stunning views etc, but after a tuna boat that drifted ashore named Sensation. Back along 7 mile beach where Hannah & Alice maged to get onto the large dunes (Aboriginal legend tells that the large drifting sand dunes were named by the ancestral tribesmen Marnpi and Tatta. A great fire came from the ocean and spread across the land endangering the Aboriginal livelihood. Marnpi and Tatta decided to quench the fire by burying it, and the great sand dunes resulted from this endeavour). But the sand surfing would have been easier if they had some wooden boards. During the evening entertainment (without fires) Pat & Brian were again "told off" for being too noisy? Talk about gen Y hoon behaviour?

Monday 25th Jan 2010

The second day of the trip saw us travelling east to Lincoln National Park. Our first port of call was the whaler's way, where the whalers used to bring their catch to shore. We then proceeded into the park itself again park fees $8.00 per vehicle per day, with camping extra. Murray led the way onto the sand to the Sleaford - Wanna dune access route. After letting some air from the tyres and about 5 minutes following the red markers along the route, you could be forgiven for thinking that we were in a desert. Large sand dunes rolled in all directions. The drive west along the dune track took all morning and lunch was had at Mary Ellis Wreck beach. There was no other access to the beach apart from this one during the whole route. After lunch we made our way to the northern most point Cape Donington Lighthouse. Hannah lost a flip flop (Thong) in the waves as she was paddling, but Brian (Ann's) came to the rescue and fished it out of the drink for her. Well done! On the way back Murray took a sharp left and a bumpy ride of about 5 Km to MacLaren Point, where again a perfect beach. I am not so sure, but I still think the best camp spots are in the Coffin Bay national park.

Tuesday 26th Jan 2010

This saw us depart from the campsite for the long un-eventful drive home. Thanks to Murray & Fay for taking on the mantle of trip leader 3rd removed. Brian & Pat, Brian & Ann for your company. Baz (Linda, Hannah & Alice)

Trip Poem (From Faye Martin)

Day 1 - Coffin Bay	Day 2 - Lincoln National Park.
To Coffin Bay we went to stay. The adventurers four had plenty in store. Our first day out saw plenty of clout. The pristine beaches were within our reaches, the sheltered bays a great place to play. Six emus running, they looked really stunning. The waves came crashing, and the dolphins were splashing. Then home for our dinner, this day was a winner.	Our first stop today was at Whalers Way, the wind farms were gleaming, energy coffers receiving. Out in the sun, the sandboards were fun, with sand dunes so high our flags touched the sky. The scenery superb around every curve. With views galore, we were left in awe. Next we checked out the joint at MacLaren Point, this particular track was really quite crap ! our bodies well shaken and our hearts palpitating. Up went the groan when Murray said "home", Another great trip, Hooray and Hip Hip !!!!!
